How does the hound handle being crated?

Clare does not like to be crated. She may have some separation anxiety because she will cry in the crate if she doesn't know where anyone is. If she knows where someone is, she will settle down in the crate and sleep. She gets crated while eating and goes in on command if asked.

We crate her when we leave the house but usually not for more than a couple hours.

What does the hound enjoy?

Clare loves to watch squirrels run around outside. She gets very excited and will run between the back of the house and the front to watch them from all the windows.

She also likes collecting toys in her bed.

She gets along well with the other greyhound in her foster home and has learned a lot from that. She's still trying to figure out how to play.

Does the hound have any fears?

She's not a fan of car rides so far and does not like being crated

What type of temperament does the hound have? (Shy, outgoing, confident, etc.)

Clare was a bit timid but has definitely started coming out of her shell. She likes to know what everyone is up to (cats, dog, humans) so she's curious in that regard.

How does the hound handle new situations?

She's a bit uncertain at first (meeting new people, etc), but quickly warms up to them
